A fire at the home of Fred W. Smith, 314 South Vine street, about 7:40 o'clock this morning, caused an approximate damage of $50. The fire was concentrated in the roof and is believed to have been started by sparks from a chimney. The blaze was extinguished by chemicals.

DATE SET FOR ANNUAL FEED

FATHER-SON BANQUET WILL BE HELD NOV. 9.

SPONSORED BY HI-Y'S

Frank M. Liddle, St. Louis, Will Come To Address Meeting; To Be A Reunion Also.

Plans have been made to hold the second annual Father and Son banquet of the Hi-Y Club of the Maryville High School, Tuesday evening, November 9th. Arrangements have been made to hold this at the high school building. The Home Economics department under Miss Mabel Cook will serve the banquet, in all probability. All Hi-Y members and their fathers will dine. The cost of meal tickets for the fathers is taken out of the Hi-Y treasury with the exception of high school boys not regular members of the club who bring their fathers.

In connection with the father and son gathering this year a reunion of all former Hi-Y members will be held. Letter are being sent out to all former members of the club asking them to be present. A special program will be arranged.

Mr. Frank M. Liddle, state boys work secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of St. Louis, has sent word that he would be here as the principal speaker of the evening. Mr. J. M. Snyder, state boys work secretary of the association at St. Joseph has been asked to be one of the speakers but no word as yet has been received.

The theme of banquet will be—"Why This Team Should Work Together." Appropriate father and son week songs will be included on the program.

Last year fifty-eight sons and fathers attended the first annual event. The success of the affair established within the club the idea that a banquet should be arranged for every year. The club in its banquet program is including all high school boys who are willing to pay a straight rate on the meal tickets with no deduction which is given to Hi-Y members.

The following former Hi-Y members are receiving notice:

FARM FUTURE BRIGHTER NOW

SENATOR CAPPER SEES HOPE FOR AGRICULTURE.

"TO KEEP UP FIGHT"

Western Legislators Will Continue To Battle For Farmers' Rights, Kansan Says This Afternoon.

HYDE HERE TONIGHT.

Arthur H. Hyde, former governor of Missouri, will speak at the Missouri Theater here at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Mr. Hyde is well known in Maryville having spoken here a number of times. He has taken a prominent part in the present campaign and his caustic remarks directed at Senator James A. Reed and Harry B. Hawes have attracted wide attention.

Although the farmers of the Middle West have not yet enjoyed to the fullest extent the prosperity of other industries, they are gradually "coming into their own," Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas told those at the Republican mass meeting in the Missouri Theater here this afternoon.

"We do not belittle the important fact that post-war prosperity that has come to capital and labor alike in the industries has not been shared as it should be by the American farmers," Senator Capper said. "Some of us have urged the interests of the farm for five years and some things have been accomplished.

"Missouri this year is a little more prosperous than last year and the farmer sees some signs of daylight. Yet in other states of the West and Northwest, the farmer is still suffering low prices out of line with general prosperity which have continued ever since the collapse of prices in the fall of 1920."

Lauds Williams And Faust.

Senator Capper lauded the work of Senator George H. Williams and Congressman Charles L. Faust, saying that they had "always stood for the best interests of the farmers of Missouri and the entire Middle West."

Senator Williams has made a place for himself in the United States Senate in a remarkably short time, the Kansas Senator said, and added that "he can be of greater service to the Middle West than any other man Missouri could send at this time."

"Senator Williams was one of the staunch supporters of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill and other co-operative measures," he continued. "He seems to fully appreciate the needs of this agricultural West at a time like this."

Regarding Congressman Faust, Senator Capper said that he has a "high position on the ways and means committee of the House and he has been a strong supporter of the agricultural program. He is popular in Washington and it would be a great mistake for you people to lose his services at this time."

"Farmer Needs Help."

Returning to his discussion of the present agricultural situation, the Kansas Senator said that the farming industry "had been slower to adjust itself to the new conditions than other business" and it "needs the sympathetic attention of the people at Washington."

"But all the troubles of the farmers cannot be removed by Congress," Senator Capper reminded his audience. "However, the legislative bodies of our national government can be of very great help, and the present administration is doing everything it possibly can to aid the agricultural sections of our country."

"We of the Middle West are greatly disappointed in not being able to pass the McNary-Haugen bill, but we are still going to keep up the fight and we need the help of men you people of Missouri have already sent to the Senate and House."

Some Tariff Benefits.

Regarding the present Fordney-McCumber protective tariff, Senator Capper believes that it has helped the dairy and sheep industries, but "for the farmer's main surplus products it has failed to operate in a way that will guarantee him a fair price."

"Yet we must remember that if the protection policy gives labor steady employment at high wages, the American market is still the best in the world for the American farmer. Nothing should be hastily done that will destroy or

CARAWAY HITS EASTERN RULE

CHARGES AGRICULTURE REGION IS "IMPOVERISHED"

'WILLIAMS INSINCERE'

Senator Would Have Referendum on What He Says Cannot Be Done, Asserts Democratic Speaker.

Jost Speaks Tonight.

Henry L. Jost of Kansas City, former mayor and congressman, and Mrs. Luella St. Clair Moss of Columbia, prominent clubwoman, will speak at the circuit court room at 8 o'clock tonight. Mr. Jost was reared and educated in Nodaway County, having been sent here when a small boy from a New York orphanage. The public is cordially invited to hear both addresses at the Democratic meeting tonight.

The industrial East is being enriched while the agricultural West and South are being impoverished by the Coolidge Republican administration, according to Senator T. H. Caraway of Arkansas, addressing voters at the courthouse this afternoon in the interests of the Democratic party.

All seats in the circuit court room were filled and many persons were standing as Senator Caraway began his address. He was introduced by Ellis G. Cook, local attorney.

"The Republicans," said Senator Caraway, "started out with a slogan of 'Stand by Coolidge.' Well, Senator Pepper stood by Coolidge and spent about $2,000,000 in Pennsylvania, and he lost. Senator McKinley and a couple of his friends stood by Coolidge and put in a million dollars in Illinois, and he lost. Senator Lenroot stood by Coolidge, and now he's looking for a job that he can fill.

"Standing by Coolidge having proved a sure and certain way to the political graveyard, the Republicans now have a new slogan: 'Unparalleled Prosperity.'

"If this means that we have never seen anything like it before, then Missouri has it. But if it is something you can deposit in a bank and draw a check upon, then it is for New England and not for the agricultural section of the country.

More Bank Failures.

"If Missouri farmers, who constitute a bit more than 50 per cent of the people, are satisfied with this administration, which has resulted in more bank failures in six months in Missouri than occurred in all the forty-eight states during the eight years that Wilson was President, more foreclosures of farm mortgages and more sales of lands for delinquent taxes than in the entire Democratic administration, then they should continue to vote Republican and to continue in 'unparalleled prosperity.' If they love their own commonwealth and their own families as well as New England, it would seem that they would ask a change.

"If the vote is Republican, I would think the administration would be perfectly justified in saying that the complaints of hard times in the agricultural sections are unfounded and it would be a command to the administration to keep on legislating to enrich the industrial East and to impoverish the agricultural West and South.

"Therefore every man must answer for himself whether he wants prosperity for one section of the country and that not his own."

Senator Caraway digressed from his New England theme long enough to attack Senator Williams' stand on prohibition and law enforcement, saying:

Says Williams Inconsistent.

"Senator Williams says he was against prohibition and the Eighteenth Amendment, but that Senator Reed is a demagogue for saying he wants to change the Volstead Act, while he himself wants to submit the question to a referendum in Missouri. What he purposes to do after that, he does not say. The inference is that if the state votes wet, then he is for repealing the Volstead Act, which he says cannot be done. If it cannot be done, then I am at a loss to know what he expects to accomplish by plunging the state into the expense and confusion of a refer

Royal Party Returns to U. S. Late Today

Will Spend Tomorrow In Minnesota—Queen's Birthday Yesterday Is Spent Quietly.

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train in Canada, Oct. 30.—Queen Marie spends her last day in Canada today, entering the United States late today for a Sabbath in Minnesota before resuming her western tour.

The rest yesterday from the strenuous program of her American visit was highly enjoyable to the royal family. Except for the informal luncheon party celebrating the fifty-first birthday of Queen Marie, the royal trio spent a day of family quiet, recalling former birthdays and life in Bucharest.

The trio will arrive at Winnipeg late today for a few-hours stay, leaving there at midnight for Minneapolis.

BOTH PARTIES ARE CONFIDENT

FINAL APPEAL TO THE VOTERS TONIGHT.

MILLIONS TO POLLS

Democrats "Sitting Tight" and Republicans Base Hopes On "Coolidge and Prosperity" Issue.

Washington, Oct. 30.—With Democratic leaders "sitting tight" and Republicans optimistically claiming a last-minute wave of strength, the 1926 Congrssional campaign today draws near its close.

On Tuesday, upwards of 20 million voters are expected to go to the polls in forty-eight states to select one-third of the next United States Senate and an entire House of Representatives.

Tonight, the candidates and stump orators generally will make final appeals by radio and in mass meetings. Monday will be devoted chiefly to organization efforts to get out the vote.

The campaign is closing without any display of national excitement or enthusiasm such as usually attends a closely contested race for the control of Congress.

Democratic headquarters here has been shut against publicity for the last week, the board of strategy having decided that matters should be permitted to rest now where they are. The tariff statement of Secretary Mellon went unanswered and comment was declined by Democratic leaders upon any late developments of the campaign.

The following statement alone came from the Democratic Senatorial headquarters:

"This has been a bad year for titleholders. Champions of tennis, golf, pugilism and baseball have all been dethroned. The Republican party, present title-holder in politics, is in for a licking. Democrats will be victorious next Tuesday."

Republicans, on the other hand, were on the offensive, using the Mellon tariff statement and attacking the Democratic tariff plan. They are making an urgent appeal to "stand by the President."

While Chairman Gerry of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee declined comment, Chairman Phipps of the Republican Senatorial committee issued the following statement:

"Commerce, industry, and business in general are flourishing. The country is in a state of widespread prosperity, which under continued Republican administration will spread to every individual section."

Lucius Slagle of Ravenwood was appointed constable of Jackson township by the county court in session this morning. The man elected as constable at the last election failed to qualify and there has been no official constable since that time.

The building was built by the Crown Construction Co., of Lincoln. The contract price was about $37,000. The court and the contractor were about $514 apart and a meeting wil be held next Wednesday to decide this matter. The county court will meet in regular session next Wednesday instead of Monday.

Hints and Helps for Farmers by J. Ross Fleetwood County Extension Agent

I think it will be worth while for everyone who possibly can to visit the Wabash demonstration train at either Burlington Junction or Maryville, Wednesday, Nov. 3, and at Maryville at 10:15 a. m., on the same day. This special train is being run by the Wabash in cooperation with the Missouri College of Agriculture and the State Board of Agriculture.

There will be a special car devoted to soils. Another to dairy and a third to modern farm home conveniences.

The soils car will be in charge of M. F. Miller, chairman of the Department of soils, and P. F. Schowengerdt, Extension Specialist in Soils, both from the Missouri College of Agriculture. They will explain the Missouri plan of soil improvement.

The dairy car will be in charge of A. C. Ragsdale, head of the Dairy Department and A. F. Stephens, Extension Specialist, both from the College of Agriculture. They will discuss the breeding and feeding of dairy cattle for high production.

The Farm Home special car will be in charge of Miss Fra Clark, Extension Specialist in Home Economics and J. C. Wooley, head of the Agricultural Engineering Department of the College of Agriculture. They will discuss water systems, sewage disposal systems, lighting and power equipment for the farm home.

In addition to the speakers there will be exhibits in all the cars.

Dean F. B. Mumford of the Missouri College of Agriculture, S. M. Jordan of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture and Miss Mabel Campbell, head of the Department of Home Economics of the College of Agriculture, will all be speakers of general interest. Most of us have heard Dean Mumford and S. M. (Sam) Jordan before and those of you who have will, I think, join me in saying that they would be worth going to hear even if the rest were not along. Try to arrange your work so as to be at one or the other of these stops.

Here is something to thing about: In Winneskiek County, Iowa, keeping of accurate farm records revealed that one man received $175.00 profit from each brood sow kept on the farm while another received only $90.00. Another received $4.50 per hen kept while another realized only $1.20 per hen. Brown County, South Dak., adds the following data on corn. The cost of producing corn on 20 farms in the county varied from $ .51 to $2.20 per bushel.

It doesn't take much study to pick out the profitable from the non-profitable in the above. If some can make $175.00 per sow, $4.50 per hen and produce corn for 51 cents, while others receive only $90.00 per sow, $1.20 per hen and produce corn for $2.20 a bushel, what is wrong? It won't take much legislation for the first group to make a nice profit but it will take more legislation than we have on hand to make the second group make money. From the above it would seem that there is plenty of room for some farmers to do some of the much needed relief work right at home and have no one but himself to blame if it isn't done.

Great care should be exercised in the selection of cockerels for the breeding pen. It is folly to spend the summer culling and grading the flock then mate the hens with inferior cockerels. Much has been said about pure bred bulls, boars and rams, but just as much if not more importance should be attached to the selection of the cockerels. Most poultry authorities agree that high production is mostly transmitted from the hen to the male thence to his daughters. The price of good cockerels may seem high but the cheap cockerel is really the costly one after all.

Any boy or girl interested in pig club work or baby beef club work, should make arrangements soon to get their gilts and calves because the member who gets an early start has an advantage over those who start later.

"The farmer is interested in the foreign market for his surplus, but he is interested every day in the year in the market that exists here at home. The greater that is, the less must be the surplus that must be in some profitable way disposed of abroad. This is the problem and I assure you, my friends, that the Republican party is greatly concerned about it and interested in finding its solution.

To Keep Up Fight.

"Your western Republican representatives will vote again when Congress meets, as they voted this last year, for the Haugen bill, or for a better plan if it can be found to solve the problem of the agricultural surplus. We are not going to take a step backward. We are going forward to a solution of this basic American problem, and we believe we shall succeed."

Preceding Senator Capper's address, Congressman Charles L. Faust of this district made a short talk in which he outlined the accomplishments of the Coolidge administration. Mr. Faust based his plea for re-election upon the theory of harmony between the legislative and executive branches of the government.

Both Congressman Faust and Senator Cappper were introduced by Roy Lippman. A large crowd attended the meeting.

Senator Capper arrived in Maryville late last night from Tarkio where he spoke. He was taken to Grant City this morning by J. F. Hull, E. C. Curfman and C. D. Bellows and he made an address there, returning to Maryville about noon.

i ASK YOU.

When you go to the polls Tuesday do you know just how you are going to vote? There have been hundreds of messages designed to tell you the man to vote for and the proposition to scratch "Yes" and vote "No"—and scratch "No" and vote "Yes." I don't claim to know a whale of a lot about these men and these propositions, but I do know that you should not scratch your own "Health Protection" when you poll your vote for your own wearing apparel.

Every day I see men coming into The TOLLES CLOTHING STORE and polling a heavy vote in favor of their suits to protect looks, overcoats to protect against the cold, and Mallory Hats to protect that bald head.

I suggest that a heavy vote be cast next Tuesday, and that you do not fail to come in and see the TOLLES stock of reasonably priced "Protection" apparel before you return home.

Democratic Chairman Urges a Full Vote

Charles F. McCaffrey, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, issued the following statement today:

"It is one of the great principles of the Democratic party that a voter should have the right to go to the polls and cast his ballot for whomever he may desire, and to that end, I desire that every voter go to the polls on next Tuesday and make his own selection.

"Honesty in election is the bulwark of American institutions. The Democratic judges at every precinct in Nodaway County have been instructed to see that the law in every particular has been obeyed, and I now call upon the citizens of our county to see that the election laws are obeyed, so that the will of the people might be expressed at the polls."

"It is such an obvious attempt to court both the wets and the drys, without committing himself to either, that it seems that he ought to forfeit the confidence of both."

Then he returned to national issues:

"We are told to stand by Coolidge. I want to ask if any Republican knows where Coolidge stands on farm relief, where he stands on prohibition, on the Klan, on corruption in governmental circles?

"During all the investigations that led to the exposure of the oil scandal and the Daugherty disgrace, he never gave voice to a single expression that would indicate that he comprehended or was impressed. On the spending of millions of dollars in Pennsylvania, Illinois and other states, he has refused to express himself. He declines to say whether he is for or against Smith in Illinois, to whose campaign the chief public service magnate of the state contributed heavily.

"Follow, But Where?"

"No, the 'Stand by Coolidge' cry reminds me of the epitaph which read:

"'Stranger, remember, as you pass by,
'As you are now, so once was I;
'As I am now, so must you be:
'Prepare for death and follow me.'

"An Irishman came along," said Caraway, "and said, 'First I want to know where you are going.'

"It is a simple business proposition," the senator said: "Has it proven profitable to agricultural communities to support an administration whose sole interest apparently has been to minister to the wants of an industrial East? If it is not worth the price, then vote the Democratic ticket, so that the administration and everyone may know that you are not satisfied with present conditions."

This and That

Harry Lauder was in Maryville last night. I think it was he. If it weren't, someone must have slain the venerable Harry and stolen his highland costume—but then, this is Hallowe'en and there's no telling.

Maryville's brass band did more playing today than at anytime since the days of the old Nodaway County Fair. The Band played for the Republicans at 1:30 o'clock then, after the advocates of Republicanism had been led to the Missouri theater, the band went back to the Square and played again; this time for the Democrats who met in the courthouse.

Maryville Pictures Taken From Airplane

D. A. Caldwell and Townsend Godsey Get Some Excellent Views Which Will Be Displayed Soon.

As far as is known the first air pictures of the city of Maryville and surrounding territory have been made this week by Townsend Godsey and D. A. Caldwell in the "Blue Ship" piloted by F. J. Huff and J. B. Autrim of Richards Field, Kansas City. Several flights were made to secure pictures of the Teachers College campus and buildings, the court house, Country Club and general views of residence sections of the city. Excellent results have been secured and the pictures will soon be exhibited in a store window. Maryville looks even better from the air than it does from the ground. Weather permitting, the plane will be carrying passengers tomorrow from the flying field on the Herren farm just east of the Wabash viaduct on State Highway No. 18, a mile and a half east of the city.

WHITSELL FOR CONGRESS

In selecting a person to represent the Fourth Congressional District in the lower house of Congress, the farmers of the great Platte Purchase should select one who best represents their interests.

John C. Whitsell, the nominee of the Democratic party for Representative in Congress from this Congressional District, believes in giving to the farmers relief from the burdens which have been pressed upon them by the Republican Congress for the past six years.

The Democratic party of the Fourth Congressional District of Missouri presents John C. Whitsell of St. Joseph to the people of this district as their representative in Congress. Dr. Whitsell has pledged himself to the people of this district, and pledged that his every action and vote in Congress will be for the interest of the great agricultural district in which he lives. He believes that no class of people needs to be represented in Congress more than does the farmer. The time has come when some action of Congress should be had to aid the burdened farmer, and assist him in throwing off the mortgages that are about to destroy him. He believes in farm legislation and has pledged himself to support the bills that the farmers themselves want, and which they must have, or else destruction will overtake them.

A vote for Doctor John C. Whitsell is not necessarily a vote for a Democrat, but it is a vote against the great Eastern corporations, a vote against the high protective tariff, and a vote for the masses of humanity. He is capable to thus represent our people.

AGRICULTURE INSTRUCTOR WOULD ASSIST FARMER, TOO.

WILL VISIT CLASSES

Elmer R. Coats Plans To Give His Class Practical Experience On Field Trips And In Judging.

Rural schools in a radius of six miles of Maryville, numbering probably eighteen or twenty, have been offered the services of Elmer R. Coats, instructor of vocational agriculture in Maryville High School.

Mr. Coats plans to visit each of the schools at frequent intervals, to assist the rural teachers in teaching of agriculture and to help them with any other problems that may arise. Usually his visits will be timed so that he will take over the agriculture class himself. He will take both his own students and rural pupils on field trips and will give them instruction in judging. He will visit the homes of the pupils, assist them in any projects they may wish to undertake now, and next summer will encourage them to begin feeding or crop growing projects.

The instructor also offers his services to the parents of the rural pupils. His services along this line resembles those of the county farm agent. Recently he has been receiving many calls to cull chickens, and to diagnose diseases of poultry and livestock. In one instance advice was sought for remodeling a poultry house.

On most of these trips, Coats takes with him his class from the local high school, giving them practical experience.

"In many instances," the instructor said, "we find that rural teachers, however well equipped they may be to teach other subjects, have little or no training in methods of teaching agriculture. Practically all of them are glad to have assistance and advice.

"Then, too, there is a surprising lack of knowledge about vocational agriculture. We now have a three-year course in Maryville High School, during two years of which the student spends half of each day in agricultural subjects. Our contact with the rural schools, of course, should be beneficial to both."

Pupils, teachers or parents wishing further information may write Mr. Coats or may telephone him at Hanamo 3511.

Miss Witch--Model 1926

Critics of the modern maid sometimes slip over wisecracks about "bats in her belfry." But all the girls and all the boys, too, know that the bats in the picture merely mean that ride 'em high, ride 'em low, all the boys are batty over this witch of 1926, and will keep flutterin' like bats about her.

MORE HOT SHOTS

Homer Gile reports in commercial geography class that whenever he thinks of the state of Vermont he is reminded of two things—Calvin Coolidge and Maple sugar.

Mr. L. L. St. Clair is beginning to believe that students are falling adherents to the use of the "foolish." "I do what you don't; I don't what you do."

The annual is progressing. The juniors are having their pictures taken.

It is said that the great Lincoln said a great deal in a few minutes. John Lee Cockayne, grade student, proved that he could say a great deal in a few minutes when he got up before the student body to say he believed in football and every loyal football fan should attend the game.

To put the cork on their victory with Trenton High yesterday on the college gridiron the students of M. H. S. raided the Electric Theatre last night with the consent of the manager, Tom Clark. The only term on which the students were to be allowed to do this was to enter the theatre single file so that the manager could see that the pep party was high school students only.

The History Club is going to give another Armistice Day program this year. The only difference between the program this year and last year is this—it is not going to last two hours and ten minutes.

The class in public speaking is studying some real "tongue-twisters." This for example: "Theopolis Thistle, the successful thistle sifter, in sifting a seive full of unsifted thistles, thrust 3000 thistles through the thick of his thumb. Now, if Theopolis Thistle, the successful thistle sifter in sifting a seice full of unsifted thistles thrust 3000 thistles through the thick of his thumb, see that thou in sifting a seive full of unsifted thistles thrust not 3000 thistles through the thick of thy thumb. Success to the successful thistle sifter."

Committee meetings are getting as numerous as broken glass following a dollar sale where they gave away fifty cents to the first seven ladies to enter the building.

Students that have made high grades for the first six weeks are advised to keep up the good work and students to the contrary are advised to apply more personal energy.

The Hallowe'en season as usual was evident in school. So many parties that students had to "draw straws" on which ones they should attend.

The Hi-Y last week was wondering how much money they would derive from their movie show benefit. They got $83.15. Now it is a question next week how to spend it wisely.

The Claytonian Society was the scene of battle when the argument of self-made men and education and money were topics of war-fare. Some of the members inclined to believe opposite received some new impressions.

Mary Jackson Wins first in Girl Scouts Essay Contest

Miss Mary Jackson won first place in the essay contest which was held in connection with Girl Scout Week here, it was announced today. Miss Eleanor Stanfield won second and Miss Ruth Kramer was awarded third prize.

The subject was "Why I Am A Girl Scout," and Miss Laura Hawkins was the judge. The assays were numbered and the names of the contestants were not known by the judge.

The first prize won a sterling silver scout ring.

The essay follows:

WHY I AM A GIRL SCOUT
By Mary Jackson.

There are numerous reasons for my being a Girl Scout. The chief reason is the high ideals and the moral teachings which it sets forth. The motto, slogan, promise and laws reveal this and the "general atmosphere" of the organization tends to build character. The Girl Scouts teach the young girl those qualities which constitute "clean thoughts, words, and deeds."

Second comes the knowledge which one gains by being connected with the Scouts. Knowledge of the home, health, first aid, nature, camp-life and many others which become priceless to every Girl Scout. As a Girl Scout one receives knowledge which the average girl does not have. She learns to put patriotism, domestic science, outdoor activities and service into her life as non-members of the Girl Scouts do not. Thus she becomes more efficient through the Girl Scouts.

Also, one of my reasons for becoming a Girl Scout is that a Girl Scout is a more progressive person. She is always on the alert, eager to find new and better ideas. She is not satisfied to do what others have always done—she wishes to do better. Her mind is broadened and her ideals and aims in life are of the very highest. By observing and abiding by the principles of the Girl Scouts she develops into a woman possessing those characersistictics which make her true to her country and invaluable to her friends and family.

A Girl Scout cultivates a feeling of Christian love toward all her associates who are less fortunate than she and displays a charitable attitude toward other's faults.

Last, but not least, comes the glorious fun which every Girl Scout enjoys. Fun, not only in games and parties, but in every phase of its work.

The Girl Scout organization is like a universal game, reaching and teaching the best, at the same time combining all this with good times.

Ormiston has been sought throughout the country on a charge of conspiring with the evangelist to perpetrate a kidnapping hoax. It is claimed that Mrs. McPherson was with the radio operator during her ten-days absence from Angelus Temple and not with kidnappers, as she declares.

Ormiston's trunk, according to the district attorney, to whom it has been shipped, is filled with feminine finery, heavily perfumed, including silk pajamas, negligee and an evangelist's red dressing gown.

Pilot Lew Gower Here for Two Days

Lew Gower, an airplane pilot well known here, arrived in Maryville today and will remain over Sunday, carrying passengers from the field located 1¾ miles east of the Engelmann greenhouses on the Gross farm.

Gower spent several weeks in Maryville in 1922, when his wife was a patient in the hospital here. In that time he made many acquaintances, and he has returned each year except the last.

Gower has been flying for ten years. He received his training in the British Royal Air Corps, in which he enlisted in 1917 at the age of 17, too young to enter the American service. He served with the Canadian fliers for twenty-seven months. He has a five-passenger plane manufactured by the Standard Aircraft Co.

Say McDermott Had Threatened Mellett

"Key Man" In Slaying Mystery Identified By Six Friends and Relatives of Editor.

Canton, Ohio, Oct. 30.—Patrick McDermott, elusive "key man" in the Don R. Mellett murder investigation, today was identified as the man who threatened the life of the Canton publisher a few days before Mellett was shot down for his activities against the underworld.

Six former friends and relatives established the identification. C. B. McClintock, county prosecutor, said he repeated his threat that unless Patrick make a detailed confession, he will be brought to trial immediately on a first degree murder indictment.

Bankers Will Aid Cotton Planters

14 Million Dollar Fund Has Been Raised in Holding Corporations for Benefit of Growers.

St. Louis, Oct. 30.—Bankers and financiers of the Old South have rallied behind the principal crop of the district—cotton—to precent the planters from suffering tremendous financial loss as a result of the record-breaking crop this year.

A survey completed by the United Press today shows that approximately 14 million dollars has been raised in holding corporations of the various sections to insure planters against loss and to allow withdrawal of a considerable amount of cotton from the market.

The amount of cotton to be withdrawn totals approximately four million bales and this will greatly relieve the tension on the cotton market, planters and brokers say.

Osage Slayers May Face Trial by State

Prosecutors, Eager for Death Penalty, May Revive Old Indictments Charging Dynamiting of Home.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 30.—W. K. ("Bill") Hale, "king of the Osage Hills," and his cowboy friend, John Ramsey, may yet face the possibility of death in the electric chair for their part in the Osage Indian murders.

Officials today were considering whether or not to place the pair on trial in a state court in an effort to obtain a verdict with capital punishment.

State charges of dynamiting the the home of W. E. Smith and his Osage family at Fairfax, Okla., are still pending against Hale and Ramsey and it is considered by the state as a strong case.

Hale and Ramsey, it was revealed by the federal jury, escaped the gallows in the federal trial which ended yesterday, by only one vote. Eleven of the twelve jurors desired the death penalty but the twelfth held out and a verdict compelling life imprisonment was returned.

According to the St. Joseph News-Press, a Ford Coupe belonging to R. E. Jones of Maryville, was stolen from Fifth and Edmond streets in that city Thursday night.

CHAPTER I.

The hatbox had fallen down exactly five times when the gray tweeds came to the rescue.

Judith was so busy soothing the enraged old lady in the seat behind, upon whose head the box already had descended twice, that she scarcely noticed the man who wordlessly stretched out a long arm and adjusted the baggage securely on the rack.

But when she turned away from the sputtering dame, she saw that her rescuer was tall and that the shoulders beneath the gray tweed were somewhat stooped, as he bowed to her and stepped back in the aisle.

"Thank you," she smiled. "You've saved my best bonnet."

The knight errant flushed. "I think it will stay in place now," he said awkwardly.

Judith smiled again and looked at him, her wide gray eyes dancing, her lips parted for another sally. But the gray tweed shoulders straightened and retreated down the aisle, their dignity somewhat impaired by the lurching of the train.

So she closed her mouth, stared at him, and allowed an impudent wrinkle to mar the perfect contour of a normally straight nose. Humph! She patted the edges of her hair, which flamed a dark but brilliant red beneath her tiny hat, shrugged her shoulders and returned to her book. It was a dull gray volume, titled "The Comparative System of Grading, as Used in American Universities." She apparently became interested in it and the injured old lady behind her, after darting one or two more hostile glances at the back of her neck, finally turned her attention to the landscape.

The next station was a junction, which evidently had been accumulating college students for hours past, for when the Pendleton train drew up at the platform, an army of noisy young barbarians stormed the coaches, and Judith's car suddenly was full of bright scarves and raccoon coats and bizarre luggage with loud labels.

As the seats filled, Judith removed her coat from the vacant space beside her and laid it on the misbehaving hatbox. Immediately a mouse-colored youth slipped into the place. Judith glanced sidewise at him, without turning her head, and met his eyes in a similar manœuver. The youth laughed, and Judith, blushing faintly, smiled.

"This seat occupied?"

Judith shook her head. "No," she said, demurely.

The youth pulled a ponderous pipe from a bulging pocket and stroked it thoughtfully. Then, glancing over his shoulder, "Wonder if I could sneak a few drags before the trainman comes through? They don't enforce the no-smoke rule very much, anyhow, on these college trains."

"Not much chance against a mob like this, I guess," commented Judith. "Are all the trains like this one?"

"This one's tame compared with most of 'em," he answered dryly. "You ought to see one of the trains after a big game, when everybody's got a singin' jag. Victors celebratin' an' losers drowin' their sorrows. You a newcomer?" He inspected her more closely.

"Yes," said Judith. "I don't know anything about university life."

He stopped puffing at his pipe and regarded her in some surprise. "A freshman?"

Judith's lip curled and straightened again. "No. But I went to a girls' school, you see." If he had looked at her more closely he would have seen an amused twinkle in her eyes.

The mouse-colored one nodded sagely. "Mm-m. One of those high-finished models from a female academy. Well, you've got a lot to learn.

"But I'll give you a rule of three," he added. "Keep your eyes and ears open, keep your mouth shut, and don't drink any liquor until you've had it analyzed. Follow directions, and you may live to graduate."

He paused, and a shout went up from the coach behind. At sound of it he straightened up and smiled faintly—rather condescendingly, Judith thought.

"That smoking car," he remarked indulgently, "is full of Betas and Phi Delts, and they're shooting high-powered propaganda into all our best rush prospects. And not a Sigma Psi on board but me."

Judith's eyes followed his as they glanced at the small pin, heavy with rubbies and diamonds, on his vest.

"Probably ought to crash the gate back there," he confided, "and corner a mess of frosh for Sig Psi. But I don't feel equal to it. After three years that sort of thing kinda palls on one, y' know. But then, I suppose you don't know. Probably didn't have national fraternities where you came from. What sorority are you aiming at?"

Judith hesitated a moment. "Why, I don't know. None, probably."

His sparse eyebrows went up in mild surprise and he stared at her with a new interest. "How do you get that way? Do you know what life is like for a barb in Pendleton U?" He surveyed Judith's trim chiffon ankles and the choker of stone marten that she wore against her dove-colored suit.

"Tell you what I'll do," he went on. "I'll give your name to some friends of mine—Thetas and Kappas and a Gamma Delt. It's pretty late but they're still making dates for a rush week. Tell me about yourself so I can boost your stock. Make 'em think I've known you all my life."

Then, seeing that Judith was searching for a reply, he added, "Only fair to tell you something about myself first. I'm Will Wetherel, of the Sigma Psi house. Member Scabbard and Blade, former editor "Sugar and Spice," charter member Carlyle Club and Talk Club and chief high mogul of the Gerhart faction." His lips curved in a fatuous smile. "That enough recommended?"

Judith's brows knitted. "Certainly," she said, "and it's good of you to be interested. But I really think I shan't have time for sororities. Thank you just as much."

Wetherel gazed at her solemnly. Then he pursed his lips in a soundless whistle. Judith looked out the window, and Wetherel filled his pipe again and thrust it between his teeth. A sound of shouting came from the rear coach. He rose lazily and stood looking down at her. "Guess I'll wander back and throw the fear of God into those Phi Delts," he remarked, and retreated elegantly down the aisle.

Judith sat and frowned at the landscape whizzing by. To be taken for a freshman! Well—and she smiled at the thought—the day might come, of course, when she would look upon such a mistake as a compliment rather than a blow to her sophistication. But not yet. Not while her years were so few.

Again the impudent little wrinkle chased itself across her nose. She smiled once more at the recollection of something the youth, calling himself Wetherel had said, permitted a vagrant thought of her knight of the band box to flit through her head and turned once more to her book at a forbidding paragraph beginning, "The advantage of the comparative system of grading in colleges where the honor system is employed have been questioned by several leading authorities.'

The riotous train, it seemed, had not yet reached the height of its riotousness.

The next station produced a still larger and apparently younger crowd of students than the last. And these evidently had a "singing jag."

They burst into the train in full chorus, jamming the aisles and flapping crazy pennants, to the annoyance of mature passengers and the obvious disgust of those older students who were staring indifferently out of the windows.

The seat beside Judith was taken by a girl who dropped into it without so much as a glance to see who was beside her and began applying her lipstick with great concentration. She would not be distracted from her absorbing occupation until a cavalier of striped hatband and blotchy complexion approached, to hang over her.

"Great joint this school's gettin' to be," he remarked. "Hear old Timothy Brown's heading the discipline committee. If so, Lord help the student body. He's a regular old woman. Never knew the delights of wine, woman and song himself, and doesn't mean to let anybody else know 'em."

"Yeah," the girl said, still pecking at her mouth with the corner of her handkerchief and staring into a looking glass in the top of her handbag. "Timothy's pretty sour."

"D'you hear Eric Waters is coming down? You know—the Princeton celebrity. They say his dad's sick of spending cash on him at Princeton and has sent him down here on an allowance of a hundred and fifty a month."

The girl closed her bag and licked her lips carefully. "That's tough," she said. "Is he good looking?"

"Couldn't say," answered the blotchy youth. "The girls seem to think so, but I wouldnt be surprised if it was a case of money making the man. I imagine I could think most anybody was handsome if he had John D. Rockefeller's money."

The girl shrugged, and essayed a careful smile, as if she were afraid her heavily made up lips were going to crack. "I could myself," she agreed. "The shieks of Pendleton will have their work cut out for them from now on, with Eric Waters providing the competition."

Their conversation drifted on . . . . Judith had been reading one paragraph over and over while the chatter of the youthful pair invaded her left ear. She jerked angrily and concentrated on her book, and a tiny frown furrowed her brow.

The girl beside her glanced her way, and then, as if she had seen something unusual, began "taking Judith in." The blotchy youth, too, seemed to find the sight of the red-haired girl not uninviting, and permitted himself to stare and then to exchange a knowing look with his companion.

Judith, aware of their regard, shifted uncomfortably, and a slow wave of color suffused her pale cheeks. She closed her book with a snap, and the pair beside her, apparently consciousness at last of their rudeness, turned attention elsewhere. Judith heard vague snatches of their murmured talk—"majoring in English"—"made up six hours at summer school"—"hope Prof. Robby takes me in his medieval history course."

Judith was suddenly aware of a tall, gray figure moving down the aisle. It was the gray tweeds, and she allowed herself this time a good look at her knight of the hat box. His face, like the rest of his figure, was lean, and his clothes, while apparently new, gave the effect of looseness. He had a small mustache. Apparently, Judith thought, he was one of those men of whom tailors despaired of ever presenting a "natty" appearance.

He passed Judith without a glance, his tanned face a trifle averted from her, and she experienced a little feeling of amusement, not unmixed with a little pity for the man's obvious self-consciousness. As he went by, Judith's eye caught the glint of a Phi Beta Kappa pin dangling from his vest, and she nodded her head sagely. Just as she thought—an instructor, very likely. Or maybe a professor, although he did look young for it.

"Almost in," said the blotchy young man, who was still half draped over the back of the seat. He began gathering his lady's assorted baggage.

Through the window pane, Judith could see that the train was sliding through the outskirts of a town. There were squalid gray houses on all sides, and crooked, muddy streets, with gas lamps just beginning to glimmer in the twlight. An involuntary shudder ran through her. She saw people detatch themselves from their seats and begin to assemble their grips and suiteases. A confused murmur ran through the car.

"Pendleton Station!" yelled a brakeman, banging open a door, and there was a general seromble.

Judith assembled her belongings and stood back to await her chance to get out of the mad press of noisy youth. The gray tweeds had disappeared, and she saw not a trace of the mouse-colored Wetherel. She was the only young woman in the coach who lacked a squire to engineer her bandbox. She felt suddenly loncly . . . .

The whooping, giggling throng filed out. Judith was one of the last passengers to step from the platform. She was instantly engulfed in a still larger and more clamorous throng, which milled about her with a confused thunder of noisy greetings. There was a strenuous backslapping on the part of the young men, and the girls greeted one another with shrill cries and kisses. For a moment she was swept by a wave of helpless consternation.

But relief came swiftly, though unexpected. A young giant in a loose-fitting light top coat detatched himself from the crowd and took swift strides toward her. A smile was playing about his lips, though Judith did not seet it. Indeed, all she noticed was that the shoulders beneath the top coat seemed extraordinarily broad. A football hero, probably, was her thought . . . .

The next moment the giant had stepped beside her and had snatched her suitcase and bandbox. His free arm went around her and she felt herself being carried along.

Her mouth opened to voice a protest, but she was suddenly crushed against the topcoat and staring into a pair of strange green eyes. There was a merry light in the green eyes. They seemed to be laughing at her. She struggled feebly, and then the giant kissed her soundly on the mouth.

Warding off the mob, he half pulled, half pushed her toward the taxi stand. Judith was too dazed to speak. He opened the door of a cab, thrust her inside and then slammed it shut.

"What—" Judith began, but the rude young giant turned away. She saw him toss a bill to the driver, heard him say, "The lady will give you directions."

Then he vanished in the crowd.

Who is the strange young giant that welcomes Judith to Pendleton University so unceremoniously? Judith finds out soon, and it's his turn to be surprised.

Poppy Growing Increases.

Pecking, Oct. 30.—Poppy growing for opium production is increasing rapidly in Shensi province in spite of the fact that this was entirely stamped out as recently as 1917, according to reports received by the vernacular press here.

It is said that more than five percent of the farm land is now used for poppy cultivation and eight percent of the population are smokers of opium.

A VICTORY BY GREAT TACKLE

NICHOLAS HALTS TRENTON PLAYER ON WAY TO GOAL.

SCORE IS 12 TO 6

Plenty Of Thrills Furnished Spectators In Maryville's Triumph Over Ancient Rivay Yesterday.

Victory for Maryville High School hung by the seat of a Trenton player's trousers in the football game played yesterday on the College gridiron.

With the Spoofhounds leading, 12 to 6, in possession of the ball with less than a minute to play, things looked exceedingly rosy for the Green and Black. Accepted football tactics called for the Maryville team to "sit tight," run a line play or two and wait for the referee's whistle to declare the game at an end.

But the Spoofhounds were flushed by success. Two forward passes had been successful, and the goal line loomed in sight. Quarterback Swinford glimpsed a chance for another touchdown and an increased margin over the traditional enemy. Out shot another pass.

Moore, Trenton left halfback, snatched the oval. Exultant, he leaped toward the Maryville goal. The field seemed clear, and the hearts of Maryville rooters rose into their throats. Ten yards, twenty yards Moore raced, and the fans visioned a 12-6 Maryville victory into a 13-12 triumph for Trenton, or at best a tie.

But, no! Nichols, Maryville right guard, appeared out of nowhere. He made a desperate, clutching lurch and his fingers closed on the surplus material in the rear of the fleeting Trenton runner's uniform. The tough canvas held. Moore stumbled, fell. The referee's whistle blew.

Other Thrills Provided.

There had been other thrills in this annual game between high school rivals. Near the end of the first half, the Spoofhounds forced a Trenton man back over his goal line for a safety and 2 points. Then in the third quarter Kissinger went over for a touchdown and kicked goal, making the score 9-0.

On the kick-off after the touchdown, Williams returned from Trenton's 20-yard line to the 30-yard marker, when he went out of bounds. Howard, a Maryville mainstay in the line, was taken out with a broken rib, Nichols taking his place.

On passes and line plays, Trenton made three successive line plays, but lost the ball on Maryville's 30-yard line when a pass on fourth down was incomplete. The Trenton line held, and Kissinger punted to Trenton's 40-yard line. Moore of Trenton fumbled and Mumma recovered for Maryville on the Trenton 27-yard line. Finding the Trenton line again adamant, Kissinger booted a place kick from the 27-yard line and the score was: Maryville, 12; Trenton, 0.

Fortune smiled on the Bulldogs soon afterward. Trenton received the kick-off but failed to make first down and punted to the Maryville 25-yard line. The ball hit Swinford on the shoulder as he attempted to spike a Trenton tackler and clear the way for a team mate to run the kick back. The Trenton team recovered on Maryville's 11 yard line.

The Bulldogs, on three plunges, made it first down with one yard to the goal. On the second play, Jones, fullback, went over for the touchdown, but Forbes' kick for the extra point was low. Score, Maryville, 12; Trenton, 6.

Forbes kicked off to the Maryville 30-yard line, and New returned 15 yards. Wilson made two yards. A forward pass, Wilson to Keever, netted 20 yards. Another pass, Bush to Swinford, made six yards more. Then came the third pass and the hair-raising finish.

Quitman Wins 42 to 9 Game From Skidmore

Victors Complete Outdoor Season Losing Only To Pickering.

The Quitman High School basketball team closed a very successful outdoor season Wednesday evening by defeating the Skidmore team by a score of 42 to 9. This was a better game than the score indicates. Quitman was in a slump in the third quarter and was outplayed by the smaller team. Quitman, however, showed flashes of good basketball, but was not consistent. The next game will be played indoors Friday night at Elmo. The Quitman team has played eight games, losing only two, and those to the fast Pickering team. Quitman has scored a total of 223 points to 96 for their opponents.

Many of our leading citizens are in Maryville today, attending the political rallies being staged in the county seat town by both leading political parties. The old political platform oratorical spell binder is a thing of the past. These meetings are no nearly so largely attended as they once were. In the political world as in all other worlds, everything has changed, and we depend more on the daily press and the radio, for our information, rather on the old time political rally.

Joab Nicholas, one of our enterprising young men, is now on the road as advertising salesman employed by the Brooker Brothers Sale Company. He just closed a large sale of furniture at Great Bend, Kansas, and is now in Palisades, Colo., nearly one hundred and fifty miles west of Denver, which will be his headquarters for a short time. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Nicholas, of Burlington Junction. He is making good. He was formerly employed in Chicago and Maryville, in clothing stores.

Mrs. Corken had as her helpers in entertaining, Mrs. John Greeley, Mrs. Hubert Corken, and Miss Della Kern. The home was decorated with such as becometh the Hallowe'en season. After a very helpful program, a three course luncheon was served by the hostess and her helpers. Those who were present were Mrs. Frank Nicholas, Mrs. Cyrus Cole, Mrs. Jim Corken, Mrs. Wroe Carpenter, Mrs. David Greeley, Mrs. Jesse Merritt, Miss Nellie Harvey and the hostesses.

The Star School Community Club gave a Hallowe'en party and entertainment at the school house Friday night. It was a masked party and generated much fun and merriment. A number of Burlington Junction people attended. After the program and the volumes of fun, had by the crowd, refreshments were served.

The basketball team of boys in company with Prof. Claude Thompson, of the high school, went to Fortescue, Mo., Friday afternoon, to attend and participate in the basketball tournament being held in that town Friday and Saturday of this week. Fanning of Quitman, Rev. C. C. Pritchard of Burr Oak, Rev. W. F. Pitker of Clearmont-Elmo, and Rev. J. Howard Thompson of Burlington Junction, the entertaining host. Chicago Closing Grain.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—All grains followed wheat to a close because of liquidation of May wheat. Wheat closed 2⅜ cents lower in all positions despite a feeble rally late in the session. Local liquidation was not so large as expected and buying was scattered.

Exports totaled 500,000 bushels including Manitoba and domestic, but despite this activity, cash prices closed ½ cent lower.

Weak wheat and heavy selling sent corn downward to new lows on the crop. Corn closed ⅝ to ⅞ cent lower. Arrival of 695 cars, indicating a large volume of old corn, continued to exert a downward pressure on the market.

Cash prices were 1 to 2 cents lower.

Oats followed the other grains in declines, closing from ⅝ to ⅝ cent lower. Cash prices were ½ cent lower.

Provisions were dull, closing lower.

Representatives Of Government May Also Object To Inspection Of Baggage Of Foreigners.

Peking, Oct. 30.—The American and British embassies, together with other diplomatic representatives here, are considering the issuance of a joint protest to the Cantonese government against the imposition of an unlawful surtax as well as the action of the nationalists in the establishment of a scheme of inspection of the baggage of passengers entering and leaving Canton.

It was learned today that the missionaries in the interior of the province of Sze Chuan have been advised to send their wives and children out of the district in view of the growing antagonism of the Chinese toward foreigners.

SPORTS

CHAMPS WITH FEET OF CLAY

BEARCATS ARE TUMBLED WITH A HEART-BREAKING THUD.

FINAL SCORE IS 50-7

Kirksville Bulldogs Go Through Line, Around Ends And Overhead.—Maryville Captain Out.

Because the Kirksville State Teachers College Bulldogs scored seven touchdowns, kicked five extra points, and booted one field goal, for a combined score of 50, while the local College Bearcats were annexing 7 points in their game at Kirksville yesterday, rumor has it that Kirksville was slightly the superior team, and that there will be no M. I. A. A. football championship for Maryville in 1926.

To the startled "Whats" and "Whys" and "How Comes" of the Maryville fans there can be no answer until tonight when the Bearcats come home on the Wabash train. Pending that arrival, Maryville football fans must remain almost horrified at the outcome of the game, and they must admit that the College team met a much more powerful eleven yesterday.

Perhaps the absence from the line-up of Eads, Maryville captain, had something to do with the misfortune that befell the idols of the local fans. The captain was called in only once, to kick the extra point after the lone Maryville touchdown, and, as in the Springfield game, he made good.

Statistics on the game bear mute witness to the fact that the Bulldogs were stronger even than they were conceded to be. Local fandom was not minimizing Don Faurot's team before the game. This fandom looked for a close game; it would not have been greatly surprised to have its team suffer a defeat by a small margin. But no fan, regardless of how pessimistic he might have been, would have even thought that any Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association team could have beaten the Bearcats by a margin of more than three touchdowns.

Just Too Much Bulldog.

A well-filled Missouri Theater auditorium witnessed the game yesterday as played on the Electro-grid owned by the College. At the beginning of the game there were hints and mutterings which sounded very much like, "Beat Kirksville." But when the game was over, unuttered thoughts were translated in a reversal of hopes in, "Kirksville Beat."

It must have been a case of just too much Bulldog. The teams started out playing hit-the-line-and-skirt-the-ends football. In this department the Kirksville team was better. Then when the score began to pile, both teams resorted to an aerial game, and Kirksville was far more successful.

The Bulldogs shell-shocked the Maryville line and ends for a total yardage of 220, while the Maryville team was able to negotiate but 76 yards from scrimmage.

In the forward passing game, Kirksville completed sixteen flips for a total of 267 yards, while Maryville gained 76 yards on eight complete passes. Kirksville had eleven incomplete passes and Maryville failed on seventeen attempts. One Kirksville pass was intercepted by Maryville, and seven Bearcat tosses found repose in the arms of Kirksville gridders.

Counting each touchdown as a first down, the Kirksville team made necessary yardage twenty-four times, while Maryville made "first and ten" nine times.

Punts About The Same.

The punts averaged about the same, Maryville having a mean of 28½ yards and Kirksville an average of 29½ yards.

Penalties show that Maryville was set back 20 yards, while Kirksville suffered an even 100. Losses were: Kirksville, 22 yards; Maryville, 8 yards.

There was one department in which Maryville shone. In the runback of kick-offs, the Bearcat luggers carried eight kick-offs back for a total of 177 yards.

According to the Kansas City Times, the Maryville touchdown followed a long run by Search. Kirksville completed a pass, and the Bearcat half recovered the fumble which came with the tackle, and carried the ball to the 5 yard line. Then Kirksville was penalized 4 yards and O'Banion carried the ball over the goal line.

Each team fumbled three times. Maryville recovered two of her own and two of Kirksville's.

By virtue of the victory yesterday, Kirksville swung into the lead in the M. I. A. A. conference. The Bearcats dropped to third place because Warrensburg trimmed Springfield at Springfield, 7 to 0. Next week Warrensburg entertains Kirksville, and Maryville plays St. Benedicts here. Springfield has no conference game.

The standing of the M. I. A. A. now is:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
Kirksville	2	0	1.000
Warrensburg	1	0	1.000
Maryville	2	1	.666
Springfield	1	2	.333
Cape Girardeau	0	3	.000
